

This means less help will be available for everyone affected by COVID in any way.

- Although the government and the employers are more interested in corporate profits than in our needs and health, we can organize to fight back.
- We can help each other deal with the cuts and protect our health.
- Many resources will be taken away. Even without Covid, we need these resources.
- It is good news that Covid cases are decreasing (for now, at least), but we still have to help each other.

Fight Back!

- Join organizations or create your own to fight for housing, food, health care, education, prison, and immigrant justice, as well as for layers of protection against COVID
- Support workers' strikes and unions organizing for higher pay, health benefits, sick leave, and safe working conditions, such as Starbucks, railroad, teachers, and health workers.
- Join organizations opposing the end of Covid emergency services that reduced evictions, increased food benefits, provided free masks, tests, medicines, and vaccines
